Help California's Wild Birds in Need

Do you support the protection of California wildlife?

Do you love watching birds?

Do you want to protect and preserve our birds for future generations to enjoy?

The Sonoma County Bird Rescue Center is a 501(c)(3) organization that assists in the rescue, treatment and release of injured, orphaned or ill birds in the northern San Francisco Bay region. We also educate the public regarding their ecological importance. BRC admits between 2,500-3,200 native wild songbirds, water birds, and raptors every year, representing over 160 species. Recent years have seen an increase in numbers of admissions, as environmental and man-made threats challenge their survival. As we enter the busy 2017 baby bird season, we find ourselves in critical need of additional aviary space and a flight hallway.

We are in urgent need of $12,000 to raise 4 new aviaries and a flight hallway. Your donation to the Give A Hoot- Help Raise a Roof aviary project will help us build these facilities, and protect our native wild birds and raptors.

Please visit our Give a Hoot, Help Raise a Roof campaign to learn more about our efforts, see the birds you will be saving, and discover the perks that await you for helping us reach our goal!

Raise your voice for the birds - and spread the word through your social networks and emails - it's the least you can do for California's wild birds!!
